The history that made today
possible

- Her Majesty the Queen opened the first University of Lincoln Building on the Brayford Campus in 1996
- It was a University forged by the will of a community, not by a government directive, and the first new city centre campus to be built in the UK for decades
- The Times Good University Guide described it as "the most dramatic transformation of a university in recent times."

The University has invested over £300,000,000 into the development of the campus
